Mapping AFMLTA Standards to AITSL Standards // 2016

www.afmlta.asn.au
Foreword

The following provides a mapping of the AFMLTA suite of professional standards documents (Professional Standards for Accomplished Teaching of Languages and Cultures [AFMLTA 2005], Lead Language Teacher Standards [AFMLTA 2012] and Indonesian Annotation of Professional Standards for Accomplished Teaching of Languages and Cultures [AFMLTA 2008]) onto the AITSL Australian Professional Standards for Teachers (AITSL 2012).

Teachers of Indonesian (and other languages and cultures teachers) can use this mapping to work both ways in considering their professional practice. That is, they can begin with the AITSL standards, and look across to the AFMLTA standards to determine how they are meeting the requirements of the AITSL standards, through recognition of their work in languages and cultures teaching; or they can begin with the AFMLTA standards, and recognise alignment with the AITSL standards, for purposes of professional career mapping, performance appraisal, promotion, registration and re-registration, and in planning theirs (and their colleagues’ - if they are in leadership positions) professional learning needs.

It is important that languages teachers are familiar with, and are able to use and respond to both sets of standards in their professional practice. The AFMLTA standards are ‘aspirational’, in that they provide examples of characteristics they should develop as languages and cultures teachers over the spans of their careers. They have been developed by languages teachers for languages teachers, and are specific to language teaching, rather than teaching in a general sense. They are intended to be read and used as a set of standards, guided by an overarching standard that states that accomplished languages and cultures teachers act ethically and reflectively, are continuously committed to learning, as teachers and life-long learners, and are... involved not only in teaching languages and cultures, but in teaching learners to value and respect themselves and to respect and understand others. The language-specific annotations of the AFMLTA standards (Indonesian is used in this mapping process, but there are also annotations for Chinese, French, German, Italian, Japanese, and Spanish), are designed to further exemplify language teaching practice in a particular language, and again as whole-of-career oriented aspirations. The AITSL standards are career-guiding and reporting and accountability standards, in that teachers are required to meet the levelled standards at various career stages, for registration purposes (graduate level), recognition of proficiency after a few years of teaching (proficient level), and for promotional purposes (highly accomplished and lead levels). Teachers at the various stages of their careers need to be able to demonstrate the full set of AITSL professional requirements for each of these career stages, and to be able to use the standards to determine, on their own and in consultation with their colleagues and managers, areas of their own professional need.

As the original purposes for development of these standards are different, the ‘discourse’ or language of description used in them also differs, as does the detail of specific content. Interpretation and judgment in aligning the standards is therefore required. In working with this document, teachers may identify further areas of alignment between the standards, as those highlighted here are intended as a guide to connecting these standards. Teachers should feel confident to include additional points of connection and alignment that are appropriate for their particular professional contexts and circumstances and to elaborate the standards to exemplify their work. The more familiar teachers are with both sets of standards, and in working across and between them, the more ably teachers will be able to describe their practice and to identify their ongoing professional learning needs, as individual teachers, and as collegial professional communities. They will also be able to explain their work to others, and how their work meets these recognised standards.

The mapping and alignment of the standards is arranged in the following format. The AITSL standards are on the right hand side of the table. Each of the seven standards and their more detailed focus sub-points is listed in order, within the three domains of teaching: Professional Knowledge, Professional Practice and Professional Engagement. On the left-hand side are aligned AFMLTA standards, identified within the dimensions of Educational Theory and Practice, Language and Culture, Language Pedagogy, Ethics and Responsibility, Professional Relationships, Active Engagement With Wider Context, Advocacy and Personal Characteristics. Annotations from the AFMLTA accomplished standards are in plain black font, and those from the AFMLTA lead teacher standard are underlined. The AITSL standards are matched to these for correspondence, with, in the main, correspondence between AFMLTA lead and AITSL lead descriptions, and AFMLTA accomplished and AITSL graduate, proficient and highly accomplished levels. Points from the Indonesian language-specific annotation of the AFMLTA standards are in italics. Repetition of points in the AFMLTA standards indicates that elaborations are related to multiple AITSL descriptors.

Educational Theory and Practice

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers have knowledge of child/learner development appropriate to the level at which they teach and apply this knowledge in all aspects of their teaching.

They engage with current theories of education, general principles of teaching and learning, and classroom management. They keep up to date with developments in the field of education through professional learning and professional reading.

They engage with current theories and developments in education and from their engagement lead others to discover and apply this knowledge.

Language Pedagogy

They have at their disposal a range of methodologies for languages and cultures teaching and in their practice select from these in a principled way, taking into consideration the learners, the learning context, curriculum goals, and the aspect of language being taught.

These choices are made at both the overall level of planning and in classroom teaching.

Accomplished teachers of Indonesian:

- construct and reflect on links between languages and cultures recognising that students are physically removed from the Indonesian language and cultural context
- display sensitivity to appropriate registers for written and spoken language use (informal/formal) and exposure of students to a range of registers, at least to develop receptive abilities

Active Engagement With Wider Context

Languages and cultures teaching is fundamentally about relationships to wider contexts and the ability to connect the local to the global.

They are aware of the impact of languages and cultures on the local and global context and on how people understand their place in the world.

They foster learners’ active engagement with broader issues and prepare their students to become knowledgeable and responsible adult participants in the global community.

Language and Culture

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers are both users and teachers of linguistic and cultural knowledge.
They have knowledge of the languages and cultures they teach which enables them to participate readily in interactions in the language in and out of the classroom. In addition, they have a developed intercultural awareness and know how to communicate across languages and cultures.

- They are actively involved in maintaining and developing their knowledge of the language and culture they teach and seek out opportunities to use their knowledge and to keep up to date with how the language and culture are used in target language communities.
- They have explicit knowledge and a working understanding of the linguistic and cultural systems of the language and how these systems work in the social lives of people.
- They understand the relationship between language and culture and have an awareness of and understanding of the role of language and culture in human interaction, and identity.

They use this knowledge to enhance their teaching. Lead teachers of languages and cultures have a sustained practice of maintaining their knowledge of the language and culture they teach, of intercultural communication, and of general principles of language and culture and their interrelationship.

- They maintain an active engagement with communities using the languages and cultures they speak through spoken, written and technologically mediated communication and lead others to do the same.
- They lead others to understand better the language and culture they teach
- They have a developed intercultural awareness, which they model for others in their interactions inside and outside school, and work to increase the intercultural awareness of others in the school and in the wider community.

Ethics and Responsibility

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers take responsibility for the teaching and learning relationship and for social and cultural relationships in their teaching.

- They have a developed knowledge of their current groups of students, and strategies at their disposal to get to know new groups.
- They establish trust between teacher and learners, which fosters an empathetic view of self and others.
- They know and reflect on their values and ideological positions and demonstrate respect for the different values of learners, communities and cultures.
- They seek to enable students to understand issues from multiple perspectives so that they can make their own choices and judgments.

Lead teachers of languages and cultures take responsibility for the teaching and learning relationship and for the social and cultural relationships in their teaching and lead others to understand and accept this responsibility.

- They model acceptance of multiple perspectives in teaching and learning and encourage others to adopt multiple perspectives in understanding issues so that they can make their own choices and judgments.

Accomplished teachers of Indonesian have a commitment to:

- explore the implications of Australia’s geographical location in the Asian region and its proximity to Indonesia
- deal with issues of race when introducing some students to an Asian culture
- explore and deal with attitudes towards and perceptions of poverty when introducing students to the language and culture of a developing country
- sensitivity to the role and importance of religion in people’s lives and identities and of different perceptions of religion (and of Islam in particular) in Indonesia and Australia
- managing conflicts which may occur in Australian classrooms where Indonesian language and culture are presented, particularly conflicts relating to stereotypes of Islamic culture presented through media and political discourse

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers use their knowledge of language and culture in order to promote learning in ways which are appropriate for learners in context and which cater for the diversity of abilities among their students, using authentic language and resources.

They have at their disposal a range of methodologies for languages and cultures teaching and in their practice select from these in a principled way, taking into consideration the learners, the learning context, curriculum goals, and the aspect of language being taught. These choices are made at both the overall level of planning and in teaching in the classroom.

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers have a view of curriculum in which planning, teaching, resourcing, assessing, evaluating and renewing are done coherently according to a principled approach to languages and cultures teaching. Accomplished teaching is reflected by an ability to explain the choices being made in planning and teaching.

Their approach to assessment examines understanding, learning, and performance, and uses assessment to foster learning as well as to evaluate learning. They know and use a range of assessment approaches and select assessment tasks that are appropriate to the purposes of the assessment and use the assessment for effective feedback and reporting.

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers are informed and critical users of technology in language teaching and use technology both to support learning and as a basis for learning to communicate using technologies.

Lead teachers of languages and cultures have a strong knowledge of contemporary theory, research and practice in language education, in areas including teaching, learning, curriculum, assessment, and evaluation and have a commitment to applying innovations in their own practice and sharing this with others.

Accomplished teachers of Indonesian:

- reflect the differences between written and spoken language in Indonesian
- provide a balance between written and spoken language use
- model relevant strategies of learning and using Indonesian (for example, analyse words for affixes and stems and using a dictionary to find verb and noun meanings)

display sensitivity to appropriate registers for written and spoken language use
• recognise what is missing in the ways textbooks present Indonesian (e.g. focus on formal registers and written language forms) and provide material to enrich students exposure to and familiarity with a range of Indonesian usages

Language and Culture
Accomplished languages and cultures teachers understand the relationship between language and culture and have an awareness and understanding of the role of language and culture in human interaction and identity.

Accomplished teachers of Indonesian have explicit knowledge of the linguistic system of Indonesian and demonstrate this in their teaching, e.g.:
• principles of word formation (prefixes, suffixes, reduplication, etc.)
• principles of sentence structure (word order, connectives, etc.)
• the sound system and orthographic system of Indonesian
• features of the noun system: e.g. reduplication
• features of the verb system: e.g. the di-passive construction, verb families built on stems + ber-, ter-, men- prefixes.
• features of noun verb system: e.g. ke- -an, pe- -an, forms.
• personal pronouns: e.g. formal and informal versions of pronouns (e.g. anda, kamu), avoidance or omission of pronouns and the use of address terms in place of ‘you’

They have explicit knowledge of aspects of Indonesian language use eg:
• differences between spoken and written language
• differences between levels of formality (e.g. non-use of verb prefixes)
• differences between colloquial and standard Indonesian
• recognising the effect of context on language use and linguistic meaning
• recognising students’ need to be able to use formal Indonesian actively, and at least recognise informal Indonesian in authentic language use
• understanding of common Indonesian politeness conventions and how they may vary according to regions and age groups

2.4 Understand and respect Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to promote reconciliation between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians

Graduate
Demonstrate broad knowledge of, understanding of and respect for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander histories, cultures and languages.

Lead initiatives to assist colleagues with opportunities for students to develop understanding of and respect for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander histories, cultures and languages.

2.5 Literacy and numeracy strategies

Graduate
Know and understand literacy and numeracy teaching strategies and their application in teaching areas.

Proficient
Apply knowledge and understanding of effective teaching strategies to support students’ literacy and numeracy achievement.

Highly Accomplished
Support colleagues to implement effective teaching strategies to improve students’ literacy and numeracy achievement.

Lead
Monitor and evaluate the implementation of teaching strategies within the school to improve students’ achievement in literacy and numeracy using research-based knowledge and student data.
They have awareness of some fundamental aspects of Indonesian values, attitudes and linguistic and cultural practices found in different ethnic groups throughout the Indonesian archipelago:

- awareness of the role of religion, especially Islam, in the Indonesian context, recognising that religion is characterised by a variety of lifestyles and is practiced to different extents by different people
- awareness of the role and significance of Pancasila in Indonesian life and culture
- awareness of Indonesian society in transition between traditional and modern perspectives and how this affects Indonesian identities, practices and language
- awareness and appreciation of Indonesian as a multilingual society and Indonesian speakers as multilingual people, usually speaking both a local language and Bahasa Indonesia
- awareness of code switching as a frequent communicative practice in Indonesian (e.g. between local/regional languages/English) depending on context, audience and purpose
- awareness of the hierarchical nature of some parts of Indonesian society and the diversity of relative status and expected gender roles of men and women and how these impact on behaviour and language use
- awareness of the impact of demography, geography and climate on Indonesian ways of life
- awareness of the relationship between Indonesian

Educational Theory and Practice

- Accomplished languages and cultures teachers are aware of the culture of schooling in the contexts in which they teach. They actively engage with education policies, and curriculum frameworks. They are able to locate languages within a wider educational context, creating connections with other curriculum areas and with extracurricular activities.
- Lead teachers of languages and cultures have demonstrated consistent and innovative practice over time. They seek to improve their practice and share their experience and knowledge with others to develop the profession as a whole.
- Lead teachers of languages work actively with others to create connections between curriculum areas and between teachers of different languages.

Active Engagement With Wider Context

Lead teachers of languages model connections with a wider sphere of understanding of how languages and language learning relate to wider intellectual and global realities and support others in making these connections.

Ethics and Responsibility

Accomplished languages and cultures teachers seek to enable students to understand issues from multiple perspectives so that they can make their own choices and judgments.

Accomplished teachers of Indonesian have a:

- commitment to dealing with issues of race when introducing some students to an Asian culture
- commitment to managing conflicts which may occur in Australian classrooms where Indonesian language and culture are presented, particularly conflicts relating to stereotypes of Islamic culture presented through media and political discourse.

Advocacy

There may be particular areas in which advocacy is needed relating to the ways Australians react to political and social events in Indonesia.

Language Pedagogy

- They have a view of curriculum in which planning, teaching, resourcing, assessing, evaluating and renewing are done coherently according to a principled approach to languages and cultures teaching. Accomplished teaching is reflected by an ability to explain the choices being made in planning and teaching.
- Their approach to assessment examines understanding, learning, and performance, and uses assessment to foster learning as well as to evaluate learning. They know and use a range of assessment approaches and select assessment tasks which are appropriate to the purposes of the assessment and use the assessment for effective feedback and reporting.
- They have at their disposal a range of methodologies for languages and cultures teaching (including assessment) and in their practice select from these in a principled way, taking into consideration the learners, the learning context, curriculum goals, and the aspect of language being taught. These choices are made at both the overall level of planning and in teaching in the classroom.
- They work with others in designing, implementing and evaluating languages programs and languages and cultures learning models, suitable to different contexts.
- They support others in creating a culture of learning in their classrooms/schools that fosters an interest in and engagement with languages and cultures and encourages learners to accept responsibility for their own learning.
- They support others in identifying and selecting appropriate ways of teaching (including assessment) to foster students’ achievements in learning languages and cultures.

Educational Theory and Practice

- They engage with current theories of education, general principles of teaching and learning, and classroom management. They keep up to date with developments in the field of education through professional learning and professional reading.
- They engage with current theories and developments in education (including those related to assessment and reporting) and from their engagement lead others to discover and apply this knowledge.
- They actively lead others to develop their understanding of education policies and curriculum and assessment policy. They take a lead role in developing and implementing language and education policies in their own schools and the profession more broadly.

- They adopt a critical stance on their own work and to themselves as mediators of languages and cultures, and through commitment to the professional learning of others.

AITSL STANDARDS
Effective languages and cultures programs are actively valued within the school culture. Languages and cultures teaching and learning are valued explicitly in schools’ statements and implicitly in the schools’ planning, timetabling and resourcing for languages.

Schools actively acknowledge and foster connections between languages and other curriculum areas. Effective languages and cultures programs focus on progression in language learning both during the year and across years. They acknowledge learners’ movement through the program and ensure that prior knowledge is maintained and developed. They recognise that language learning is a life-long process and needs sustained learning during schooling.

Effective languages and cultures programs have timetabling for languages and cultures which allocates adequate time to languages to enable effective and sustained language learning, recognising that achievement in language learning is dependent on time on task.

Effective timetabling also gives attention to the frequency and regularity of language lessons.

Effective languages and cultures programs are adequately staffed to ensure that language learning can be allocated adequate curriculum time and language class sizes can be limited.

Ideally there should more than one teacher of a language in a school. Staffing models using itinerant teachers have a direct impact on program quality as they prevent teachers from forming effective professional relations with students, other teachers and the wider school community, and prevent teachers from teaching effectively.

Effective languages and cultures programs are characterised by the allocation of dedicated space which is suitable for languages and cultures teaching and learning.

Effective languages and cultures programs have budgets which ensure appropriate access to resources for languages and cultures teaching and learning, including print-based and multimedia materials, reference books such as dictionaries, information technology and library resources.

Effective languages and cultures programs recognise the practical and performance-based nature of language learning and the need for class sizes which are appropriate for facilitating language learning as a practical and intensive form of learning.

The creation of language class groups should also take into consideration the learning histories of students, their previous experiences of language learning and their background.

Effective languages and cultures programs recognise that students transferring between schools and schooling systems arrive with differing levels of knowledge of and exposure to the languages and cultures taught in the school and have strategies to facilitate transitions and enhance learning.
